BRIEFLY ON THE PALACE IN JABŁONNA

The historic 18th-century palace at Jabłonna started out as a palace and park complex built by Bishop Michał Poniatowski, the brother of Poland's last king Stanisław August Poniatowski. The King used to stay at the palace in what is called the Royal Apartments. The original classicist palace with picturesquely baroque front and an octagonal tower, built to the designs of the royal architect Dominik Merlini, was rebuilt and enlarged through the mid 20th century. Burnt down in 1944, it was reconstructed with meticulous attention to detail after the Polish Academy of Sciences took it over in 1853 as its conference venue. The central part retains its 18th century character, while the side wings reflect the 19th century alterations. The interiors were returned to their original classicist decor, furnishing them with original late 18th and early 19th century furniture. The English garden around the palace was designed by another great architect of the 1770s and 1780s, Szymon Bogumił Zug, and some of the features he introduced have survived, like the Chinese pavilion, orangery and grotto.
